INTRODUCTION

Knowledge about existing land use and land cover is important for a number of different planning functions, including estimating potential for future urban development and redevelopment, environmental quality analysis (such as surface runoff, wetlands inventories and air quality analyses), and hazard impact work (such as the impact of wildland fires, various toxic gas releases or a major earthquake). Similarly, knowledge of land use change is important because it can aid in visualizing urban development patterns and their implications.

LAND USE PATTERNS AND LAND USE CHANGE

The changes in land use that have occurred in the Bay Area in the last ten years, or even since the end of World War II, suggest that land use changes vary in type and in extent depending on the regional context. While urban context does not necessarily describe the causes of land use change, context can nonetheless describe a pattern for land use change and a better understanding of some general trends in the urban evolution of the Bay Area. It is apparent from both the 1985-1990 and the 1990-1995 Bay Area land use updates that the type of land use change and the scale of that change vary depending on the geographical location within the urban Bay Area region at large. While there are particular conditions which might induce a land use change at the local scale, such as the existence of a freeway interchange or the redevelopment of an urban area due to a natural disaster, in overall terms, the type and the extent of land use change is strongly related to its context in the region at large.

While there have been numerous studies of the trends in the urban evolution of the American City in the last fifty to one hundred years, there has been little research on urban evolution which is specific to the San Francisco Bay Area.<sup>1</sup> Geography and Urban Evolution of the San Francisco Bay Area (Vance, 1964) discusses the process of growth and change in the Bay Area. The book is unique in its socio-spatial-historical perspective. In this study, the urban Bay Area is spatially classified according to the era of development.

Based on the Vance study and on interpretations of the urban growth that has occurred since 1964, the urban Bay Area has been broadly classified according to the time period of development into:

- inner cities or urban cores (areas largely built out by 1900);
- inner suburbs (areas which developed between 1900 and 1940);
- suburbs (areas which developed between 1940 and 1980); and
- outer suburbs (areas which developed after 1980).

<sup>1</sup> Two books which stand out which discuss the process of growth and change of the American City should be noted: The Urban Wilderness: A History of the American City (Warner, 1972) and Crabgrass Frontier: The Suburbanization of the United States (Jackson, 1985). In both these books, the American metropolis is looked at socio-spatially in terms of its development in time. Although the books do not specifically define different urban areas within the American metropolis according to the era of development, they do make reference to these zones and suggest their presence.

While this report suggests the presence of four distinct Spatial-Temporal Development Zones within the urban Bay Area, it is not the intent of this report to precisely define these different zones geographically. Figure 1 depicts these different zones in broad terms. It should be noted that within the suburb and outer suburb zones, there may or may not be small urban pockets that were developed before World War II; however, because of the broadness of this diagram, they have not been shown.

Using this geographical classification, correlations between the type and extent of land use changes can be made with both within a single zone and among zones. Changes in inner city core areas typically consist of the redevelopment of industrial areas or the small-scale reuse of individual lots and buildings. Changes that occur at the fringes of the region, on the other hand, typically consist of the settlement of new residential areas on land previously used for agriculture or grazing. While there is a pattern of reuse and redevelopment within sections of inner city areas, there is a pattern of outward residential expansion in the peripheral areas of the region. Although specific contextual conditions might induce a land use change, the extent and the type of change is largely dependent on its context within the region at large.

INNER CITIES OR URBAN CORES

The Bay Area's inner cities constitute the historic core of the region and include the urban centers of Oakland and San Francisco. They were typically built out by 1900. The characteristic urban form of these areas is the street grid.

Land use changes within the urban core areas of the Bay Area during the last ten years consist of redevelopment – either of industrial areas, or of small-scale individual lots and buildings. In either case, the change has generally resulted in some type of commercial development or mixed commercial-industrial development. In the East Bay, commercial development in some of Emeryville's industrial zones has resulted in land use changes of this type. With the exception of Emeryville and the construction of the Cypress Freeway in Oakland, land use changes tend to be limited to specific lots and specific buildings. In addition, the process of military base closures throughout the Bay is resulting in large portions of land being turned over to civilian uses. While the closure of the Presidio military base in San Francisco had not yet occurred by 1995, portions of the naval base in West Oakland had been turned over to the Port of Oakland. As Figure 2 shows, within the Oakland core area the largest land use changes are due to the reconstruction of the Cypress Freeway and to the base closure of the Naval Station. Because ABAG's land use updates are based mainly on aerial photography, small-scale changes within these areas are difficult to detect.

INNER SUBURBS

The Bay Area's inner suburbs include those suburbs which developed after the turn of the century and before World War II. These areas typically developed around the streetcar and railroad system which were the main transportation network for the Bay Area during this time period. Included within these zones are the residential areas surrounding the inner city as well as those communities which developed as the railroad system expanded beyond core areas during the teens and twenties.

Generally, the urban form of these areas continues to follow a grid pattern. Typically they consist of residential areas with two or three commercial streets within them. Few land use changes were observed within these areas from 1985 to 1995. While infill development may have occurred within them, in general, they have maintained the land use pattern established originally. Within the East Bay, the development of housing and commercial-service-retail at the Richmond Marina represent some of the changes within inner suburbs in the last ten years.

Interestingly, the section of Interstate 580 that leads to the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge (rushed to completion following the Loma Prieta earthquake) was constructed on an old railway right-of-way. Again, because our land use update is based on aerial photography, small-scale changes within these areas are difficult to detect.

SUBURBS

This classification refers to the large portions of the Bay Area which developed after World War II and before 1980. Referred to by Vance (1964) as “non-centric industrial and housing areas”, most of the urban Bay Area falls within these areas<sup>2</sup>. While suburbs include large and varied portions of the Bay Area, these areas tend to have developed around a newly expanding automobile transportation system which began its large-scale expansion immediately after World War II. These areas are characterized by the prevalence of wide commercial arterials connecting to pockets of single-family dwellings.

Although these areas experienced changes in land use during the 1985-1995 period in the form of infill development, the scale of these “infill” projects tends to be large and focused around wide commercial arterials. The construction of apartments and condominiums as well as the infill of large-scale service, retail and office developments seems to be fairly typical in many suburbs.

The South Bay seems to have experienced some of the most significant changes with the development of service-retail uses along portions of the Highway 880 corridor. Also, there has been new development of light industrial research and production facilities in areas adjacent to the Bay. For example, some land which in 1985 was classified as "Marsh" or "Sparsely Vegetated" now is utilized mostly by "Light Industry." A notable exception is an area east of Fremont that was once used as a golf course. It is now one of the few areas surrounding the Bay which is, for the most part, being allowed to revert into "Marsh."

Other regions of the Bay Area, such as the 680 corridor in Alameda County and the new Highway 85 corridor in Santa Clara County, have experienced modest but diverse land use changes. In both these instances, residential development has occurred, as well as growth of commercial and light industrial uses. For example, Blackhawk grew from a few hundred dwelling units (Dus) to thousands of DUs and a golf course. Modest growth resulting in land use changes has also occurred in some areas along San Pablo Bay in the North Bay. The old site of Marine World-Africa USA near Redwood City was largely redeveloped by 1995. The new site of this recreational area is adjacent to the Solano County Fairgrounds in Vallejo, another "suburban" area.

Overall, the suburban areas of the Bay seem to be experiencing the greatest diversity in land use change. The changes range from infill housing projects to light industrial and commercial developments. Figure 4 shows some of the changes that have occurred in the South Bay surrounding the city of Newark area.

OUTER SUBURBS

Outer suburbs are those areas with new residential use that have been subdivided in the last 10 or 15 years around some of the smaller old railroad communities in the outlying areas of the greater Bay Area. Land use changes in these areas are by definition some form of new urban development. Typically the uses that occur as new development are residential, in the form of single family dwelling subdivisions, and to a lesser extent new commercial land uses in the form of retail service developments.

Large previously undeveloped lands around communities as diverse as Antioch in Contra Costa County, Livermore in Alameda County, Fairfield in Solano County or Windsor in Sonoma County have been subdivided with tracts of new single family dwellings. In addition, a relatively large percentage of undeveloped lands surrounding new subdivisions have been graded and are awaiting new construction. Similar to the original pattern of development of the suburbs, these subdivisions, as well as the commercial, retail and service developments which follow them, are not interconnected, but rather are sited as isolated semi-urban outgrowths in the California hills threaded together by a system of wide arterials and highways.

GENERAL TRENDS

By looking at land use changes in terms of urban context, some of the results of the relationships between inner city and outer suburbs can be seen. In very broad terms, it is apparent that trends in use that are typical of a suburb are occurring in the inner city, while those that are typical of the inner city seem to be occurring in the suburbs. At the same time that land uses in the suburbs are diversifying into a greater mix of uses, portions of the inner city seem to be following a suburban land use pattern through the redevelopment of industrial zones into large single-use commercial developments. Also, the increase in the mix of uses that are taking place within suburban areas is perhaps an indication of a land use pattern which might take place in the future in the outer suburbs. Changes in land use over the last 10 years have not radically changed the overall urban form of the Bay Area. However, land use change does seem to indicate the existence of a general pattern for new development and redevelopment exists in all four geographic zones in the Bay Area. This trend is perhaps due to the underlying common behavioral characteristics of Bay Area residents.

LAND USE INFORMATION SOURCES

Although land use maps of the Bay Area have existed for decades, the effort to create a systematic and routinely updated map of the region began in the mid-1970s. By 1985, the system was well established. One of the benefits of keeping the same land use mapping system since 1985 has been the potential to identify areas of significant change.

THE LAND USE DATA (LUDA) PROJECT OF USGS

In the 1970s, a land use classification system was developed by the U.S. Geological Survey for use with remote-sensing techniques and to initiate a nationwide land use mapping program. This project resulted in the preparation of a series of LUDA (Land Use Data) maps for the entire country. The LUDA map sheets for the Bay Area range in scale from 1:100,000 to 1:250,000 and are based on aerial photography from the mid-1970s.

THE LUDA AND SAN MATEO MAPPING EFFORTS IN THE LATE 1970S

San Mateo County was one of the early beneficiaries of land use mapping, both in terms of the efforts made by USGS personnel and ABAG (Napier and others, 1992). A joint U.S. Geological Survey/San Mateo County project produced a series of land use maps that were compatible with the LUDA maps for the mid-1970s at a scale of 1:24,000. These maps for San Mateo County were digitized by ABAG in 1979.

DEVELOPMENT OF DIGITAL DATA

In 1975, ABAG began the development of a series of computer-based map files to provide information for use in its environmental, earthquake safety and other planning programs. The system of files and software make up ABAG's in-house geographic information system (GIS) called BASIS, for Bay Area Spatial Information System.

The technique used to convert the hard-copy maps to digital form is commonly referred to as chain or arc digitizing. The chain data were converted to a system of grid cells, each with an area of one hectare (2.5 acres), using a Universal Transverse Mercator (UTM) grid base. Some details of the 1:24,000 scale mapping are lost in this process.

ABAG'S LAND USE MAPPING WORK IN CORRECTING AND UPDATING THE LUDA MAPS TO 1985

ABAG's efforts to update the regional and San Mateo County LUDA maps began in 1984, in conjunction with a number of different programs, including population projections efforts, earthquake hazard vulnerability analyses, air quality modeling, and work on the San Francisco Estuary Project.

ABAG staff drafted the urban data from the USGS LUDA maps onto mylar overlays registered to 1:24,000 USGS 7.5' quadrangle base maps. The locations of urban areas were updated to a consistent date of March 1985 based on (a) data from ABAG's population and employment projections staff, particularly the "Local Policy Survey" conducted in 1985, (b) interviews with local government planning and building department staff members, and (c) selected field checking, particularly in the areas of strip commercial development. The resulting urban land use maps for the nine Bay Area counties were digitized by ABAG in 1985 and 1986.

Finally, the original LUDA maps, obtained from USGS in digital form in 1989, were used as the source of the non-urban mapping for all of the Bay Area counties, except San Mateo, where the more detailed mapping was already available.

Each time a new use of the map data occurs, some minor revisions and corrections to this 1985 file have been made. For example, when ABAG last updated these files, a significant revision in the way in which the detail of infrastructure facilities are mapped should make the data associated with these facilities more useful.

ABAG'S WORK IN IDENTIFYING 1985 TO 1990 CHANGE AND UPDATING THE LAND USE MAPS

Due to time and manpower constraints, ABAG staff were not able to consult with each city government concerning land use changes in each of their spheres of influence as had been done in 1985. In order to determine areas of highest growth, population data from the 1980 and 1990 census were compared. Once the changes in population in each Bay Area census tract had been determined, areas of significant population growth and decline were identified.

The process of updating the land use maps was made more complex because of difficulties associated with 1980 to 1990 census tract boundary changes. Late 1989 and early 1990 air photographs shot from medium altitude (with a scale of 1:3,000) were used to pinpoint and identify land use changes in these areas of highest growth. While the use of air photos greatly speeded up what would have been a long and laborious task, it is often difficult to distinguish between different uses with similar patterns of development (such as light industrial and retail repair shops). In addition, while large changes were easily identified, small changes were more of a problem. Again, USGS 7.5' quadrangles were used as base maps.

ABAG'S WORK IN IDENTIFYING 1990 TO 1995 CHANGE AND UPDATING THE LAND USE MAPS

In early 1995, ABAG staff began the process of again updating the land use maps. Again, areas of potential land use change were identified based on the work conducted by ABAG's population projections staff. Again, the use of air photographs was instrumental. Both 1994 and 1995 air photos shot from medium altitude (with a scale of 1:3000) were used to pinpoint and identify areas of land use change. As in 1990, problems occurred when attempting to distinguish between different uses with similar patterns of development (such as light industrial and retail repair shops).

Again, large changes were easily identified, while smaller changes were more problematic. USGS 7.5' quadrangles were again used as base maps.

ABAG anticipates updating the map database to the year 2000 by 2002.

MAP USES

The digital map file is currently used as one component in ABAG's land use Projections effort. In addition, the data are used by the Bay Area Air Quality Management District in modeling non-point source pollutants. The data were used in the Status and Trends Report on Land Use and Population for the San Francisco Estuary Project, and have been used by others in surface runoff or non-point water pollution models. Finally, the residential data were a major component in ABAG's recent report on Estimates of Uninhabitable Dwelling Units in Future Earthquakes Affecting the San Francisco Bay Region. Similar regional efforts are appropriate.

However, because the map is regional in scope and because the data shown are generalized to area averages, the map file should not be used to determine the land use at individual locations.

THE LAND USE CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM

In 1976, the U.S. Geological Survey published a numerical land-use classification system designed to meet the varied needs of federal, state, regional, county and local governments (Anderson and others, 1976).

In this "nested" classification system, four levels of numerical subdivision are used to express various levels of detail of map data. One digit subdivisions, such as "1, Urban or Built-Up Areas," are designed to capture data that could be obtained from satellite images and that might be of interest to federal and state agencies. Two digit subdivisions, such as "12, Commercial and Services," are designed to capture data that could be obtained from aerial photographs and that might be of interest to state or regional agencies. Three digit subdivisions, such as "123, Education," are designed to capture data that could be obtained from more detailed aerial photographs with some field checking and that might be of interest to county or regional agencies. Four digit subdivisions, such as "1231, Elementary and Secondary Schools" often require field checking and are of most interest to local governments.

In this information age, these more detailed inventory data can be successfully utilized by regional, state and federal agencies. However, the classification system remains a useful tool of collecting and categorizing data. The categories used by ABAG are described on the following pages. It is not identical to the breakdown used on the tables which follow. Thus, a correspondence table is also included.

DESCRIPTION OF LAND USE CLASSIFICATION CATEGORIES

A. CATEGORY 1 -- URBAN AND BUILT-UP

Category 11 -- Residential

Residential areas are delineated to include houses, apartments, garages, sheds, lawn and streets, and can be considered a basis for gross, rather than net, residential acres. Any area of 2.5 acre (one hectare) or more where dwelling units predominate is mapped as residential.<sup>3</sup>

In the nine county Bay Area, ABAG has subdivided the residential areas into three categories based on density (using the metric hectare which equals 2.47 acres) and a fourth based on structural type. The dwelling unit per hectare value is determined as follows:

Residential density = (structures/hectare) x (units/structure) = units/hectare

The resulting subdivisions of residential use are:

- 111 -- One and Under Dwelling Units (DUs) per Hectare (approx. 2 to 5 acre lots)
- 112 -- Two to Eight DUs per Hectare (approx. 1/3 to 1 acre lots)
- 113 -- Nine and Over DUs per Hectare (less than 1/3 acre lots)
- 114 -- Mobile Home Parks (technically a part of 113 but listed separately)

Category 12 -- Commercial and Services

There are a number of types of these facilities, ranging from retail commercial, to military, to educational.

121 -- Retail and Wholesale

This category includes central business districts, as well as shopping centers, commercial strip development, auto salvage operations and motels.

122 -- Commercial Outdoor Recreation

This category includes intensive areas of recreation which cover a minimum of one hectare, including golf course club houses, tennis courts, amusement parks and drive-in theaters. These

---

<sup>3</sup> When creating a value for "total" residential hectares, or acres, it is useful to view:

- category 111 as 10% category 11 and 90% category 17 (urban open)
- category 112 as 50% category 11 and 50% category 17 (urban open)
- categories 113 and 114 as category 11
- category 1234 (university housing) as category 11
- category 1251 (military housing) as category 11

“intensive” recreational uses are mapped separately from the “extensive” outdoor uses shown in Subcategory 171.

123 -- Education

This category includes all public and private schools, including pre-schools and subsidiary land uses (such as parking, administrative structures, recreation areas and dormitories). Seminaries and novitiates are also included. Some churches and synagogues may be included in this category in San Mateo County. The category is further subdivided, when the information is available, into:

1231 -- Elementary and Secondary Schools

1232 -- Colleges and Universities

1233 -- Stadium

1234 -- University Housing

124 -- Hospitals, Rehabilitation Centers and Other Public Facilities

Included in this category are all hospitals, medical centers, mental health centers, sanitariums, and convalescent centers that meet the one hectare size specification.

1241 -- Hospital Trauma Centers (designated centers)

1242 -- Community Hospitals (not designated trauma centers)

1243 -- Medical Long-Term Care Facilities

1244 -- Medical Clinics (not used)

1245 -- Home Health Care Facilities (not used)

1246 -- Out-Patient Surgery Centers

1247 -- State Prisons

1248 -- State Mental Health and Developmentally Disabled Facilities

1249 -- Psychiatric Facilities

125 -- Military Installations<sup>4</sup>

All areas which reflect military use such as armories, national guard centers, firing ranges, barracks and arsenals have been mapped in this category. Subdivisions of these areas are:

1251 -- Military Residential

1252 -- Military Commercial/Services

1253 -- General Military Use

1254 -- Military Hospital

1255 -- Military Communications

1256 -- Military Airport

1257 -- Military Open Areas

1258 -- Military Port

---

<sup>4</sup> Both categories 1257 (military open) and 1255 (military communications) can be included with category 17 (urban open) when generalizing these data. Category 1251 (military residential) can be included with category 11 (residential). This simplification has been used by ABAG when developing the tables which follow.

126 -- Other Public Institutions and Facilities

This category includes government facilities of one hectare or more. Such facilities may include libraries, post offices, police and fire stations, city and county government complexes, and state and federal facilities. Eight subcategories of facilities have been included:

- 1261 -- Stadium (when not associated with a college or university)
- 1262 -- Churches and Synagogues
- 1263 -- Fire Station
- 1264 -- Police Station
- 1265 -- City Hall or County Government Center
- 1266 -- Local Government Emergency Operations Center (EOC)
- 1267 -- Local Jails or Rehabilitation Centers
- 1268 -- Convention Centers

127 -- Research Centers

Major research centers (including both offices and laboratories) have been included in this subcategory.

128 -- Offices

Some major areas of offices or professional centers have been identified and mapped in this subcategory.

129 -- Hotels

In certain parts of the Bay Area, particularly in San Francisco, areas predominately composed of hotels have been mapped.

Category 13 -- Industrial

This category includes the subcategories of heavy and light industrial, and metal salvage or recycling.

In the nine-county Bay Area, industrial use has been separated into these uses based both on the type of production and the product manufactured. For example, the manufacturing of locomotives would be considered heavy industrial, whereas the manufacturing of model trains would be considered light industrial.

131 -- Heavy Industry

These industrial activities are devoted to heavy fabrication, making and assembling parts which are, in themselves, large and heavy, or to the processing of basic raw materials. Most industries in this category involve mechanical, chemical or heat processing. Although salt evaporation ponds along San Francisco Bay might be considered part of this category, they are considered a part of "63 -- Salt Evaporation Ponds" for purposes of this mapping effort.

132 -- Light Industry

These industrial activities include the design, assembly, finishing and packaging of products, rather than with processing basic raw materials. Typical industries in this category include electronics firms, small textile mills, warehousing, and assembly plants. These facilities have been mapped along with associated parking lots and grounds.

133 -- Metal Salvage or Recycling

The large-scale recycling of metal in salvage yards is a form of industrial operation that does not fit the standard definitions of heavy or light industrial operations. Thus, it is given its own category rather than being placed in the general 13-Industry category.

Category 14 -- Transportation, Communication and Utilities

This category includes eight infrastructure systems as subcategories. A great deal of effort has been made to place all of these facilities in the appropriate four-digit subcategory.

141 -- Road Transportation Facilities

1411 -- Highways and Interchanges (meeting a 55-yard, or 50-meter, minimum mapping specification have been mapped; both paved areas and adjacent rights-of-way are included)

1412 -- Bus Transit Centers

1413 -- Park and Ride Lots (for car pools)

1414 -- Truck or Bus Maintenance Yard

1415 -- City, County or Utilities Corporation Yard (for the maintenance of their vehicles)

142 -- Rail Transportation Facilities

1421 -- Rail Passenger Stations (including Amtrak, BART and CalTrain)

1422 -- Rail Yards (included are switching, classification and maintenance yards, as well as terminals)

1423 -- Light Rail Stations (typically too small to meet the 2 acre, or 1 hectare, minimum)

1424 -- Light Rail Yards (typically too small to meet the 55-yard, or 50-meter, minimum)

143 -- Airports

The subcategory of Airports is broken down into Commercial (with 6 groups), Public (General Aviation), and Private Airfield. In the Bay Area, the three commercial airports of San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose are shown.

1431 -- Commercial Airport Passenger Terminal

1432 -- Commercial Airport Air Cargo Facility

1433 -- Commercial Airport Airline Maintenance

1434 -- Commercial Airport Runway

1435 -- Commercial Airport Utilities (water, communications, power)

1436 -- Commercial Airport - Other (including parking, buffers, and other land related to airport operations)

1437 -- Public (General Aviation) Airfield

1438 -- Private Airfield (note - not all private airfields are identified)

144 -- Marine Transportation Facilities

This category is characterized by port or dock facilities and associated warehouses and storage areas. This category also includes passenger terminals, slips and associated parking areas. The five commercial ports in the Bay Area (Oakland, San Francisco, Richmond, Benicia and Redwood City) are subdivided. The tug, marina, and ferry facility locations are shown.

- 1441 -- Commercial Port Passenger Terminal

- 1442 -- Commercial Port Container Terminal

- 1443 -- Commercial Port Oil and Liquid Bulk Terminal

- 1444 -- Commercial Port - Other Terminal and Ship Repair

- 1445 -- Commercial Port Storage Facility or Warehouse

- 1446 -- Tow Boat (Tug) Facility (usually too small to meet the minimum mapping size requirement of 2 acres or 1 hectare)

- 1447 -- Ferry Terminal (including associated open areas and parking)

- 1448 -- Marina

145 -- Power Facilities

- 1451 -- Electricity, Power Plant

Category 15 -- Mixed Commercial and Industrial Complexes

Areas of mixed commercial and industrial use, as well as areas of multiple commercial and industrial uses within a single structure, have been placed in this category. Areas of predominately commercial use or predominately industrial use are not included, whenever feasible. Mixed residential and commercial areas have been included as part of Category 16. Note that areas of scrap metal recycling are now included in Subcategory 133.

Category 16 -- Mixed Residential and Commercial Use

Mixed residential and commercial uses, whether in an area or within a single structure, have been placed in this category. Mixed land use is common in areas converting from residential to commercial. Also, rural centers often are too small to map separately as commercial or residential.

161 -- Transitional (mixed use of land areas)

162 -- Mixed Use In Buildings

Category 17 -- Other Urban and Built-Up Land

Areas that have been affected by urban development but with minimal paving and buildings are included in this category.<sup>5</sup>

171 -- Extensive Recreation

Included in this category are athletic fields and playgrounds. When available, two subdivisions are shown:

1711 -- Golf Courses (the extensive, not the intensive, portion -- thus, the golf clubhouse is usually shown as Category 122)

1712 -- Racetracks

172 -- Cemeteries

Public, private and military cemeteries are included.

173 -- Parks

All leisure, ornamental, zoological and botanical parks are included when the use is apparent. However, areas of extensive tree cover may be classified as forest. Thus, city parks are included in this category, but large parks (such as those operated by the East Bay Regional Park District) are subdivided into forest, grassland, etc.).

174 -- Open Space--Urban

Selected land that has been developed as an urban use but is currently vacant is shown in this category.

<sup>5</sup> Note: for purposes of obtaining a general "urban open" total area, Subdivisions 1255 (Military Communications), 1257 (Military Open), 90% of 111 (Rural Residential), and 50% of 112 (Low-Density Residential) can be included in this category.

175 -- Urban Vacant Land

Undeveloped open areas and vacant lots slated for urban development. In addition, open areas on the urban/rural boundary are shown in this category. These boundary areas were shown as urban on the USGS LUDA maps, but on ABAG's more detailed compilation have no particular urban land use.

B. CATEGORY 2 -- AGRICULTURAL LAND

Category 21 -- Cropland and Pasture

Included in this category are harvested, idle, and cultivated cropland, as well as pasture. Level III and IV categories that have been mapped in San Mateo County only:

211 -- Cropland

2111 -- Irrigated

2112 -- Non-Irrigated

212 -- Pasture

Category 22 -- Orchards, Groves, Vineyards, Nurseries and Ornamental Horticulture Areas

This land produces most of the various nut and fruit crops. Horticulture areas include greenhouses, floriculture areas, and sod farms used year after year for these purposes. Level III categories that have been mapped in San Mateo County only include:

221 -- Orchards or Groves

222 -- Vineyards and Kiwi Fruit

223 -- Greenhouses and Floriculture

Category 23 -- Confined Feeding

Included in this category are large poultry farms, as well as hog and cattle feedlots. The use is characterized by large animal populations in confined areas with many associated buildings, fences, and waste disposal areas.

Category 24 -- Farmsteads and Other Agriculture

The largest component of this land use is inactive farm land.

C. CATEGORY 3 -- RANGELAND

This division of land use includes areas where the natural vegetation is largely grasses and grass-like plants, shrub and brush, and chaparral.

Category 31 -- Herbaceous Rangeland

These areas include rangeland in which grasses and herbs, rather than chaparral and coastal shrub, predominate.

Category 32 -- Shrub and Brush Rangeland

Level III (three-digit) subcategories that have been mapped in San Mateo County only include:

321 -- Chaparral

322 -- Coastal Shrub

Category 33 -- Mixed Rangeland

D. CATEGORY 4 -- FOREST LAND

Category 41 -- Deciduous Forest

These areas include the forested areas in which deciduous trees (those losing their leaves in a dormant season) predominate.

Category 42 -- Evergreen Forest

These areas include the forested areas in which evergreen trees (those which remain green throughout the year) predominate. Level III categories that have been mapped in San Mateo County only include:

421 -- Redwood and Douglas Fir

422 -- Pine

423 -- Evergreen Mix

Category 43 -- Mixed Forest

These areas include both deciduous and evergreen trees. Neither predominates.

E. CATEGORY 5 -- WATER

These areas include those locations in the general land mass predominately covered by water with a minimum mapped width of approximately 55 yards (50 meters).

Category 51 -- Streams and Canals

Mapped streams and canals only include those locations in the general land mass predominately covered by water with a minimum mapped width of approximately 55 yards (50 meters).

Category 52 -- Lakes

Category 53 -- Reservoirs

Category 54 -- Bays and Estuaries

Category 55 -- Sedimentation Ponds

Note that areas of wastewater storage are classified as 1463, not 55.

Category 56 -- Water on USGS Base Maps but Land on USGS Land Use Maps

This category includes those areas depicted as water on the USGS 7.5' quadrangle maps, but shown as land on the USGS LUDA maps. This category, along with Category 64, were created to deal with discrepancies which occur in the mapping of the land-water boundary shown on these two data sources.

F. CATEGORY 6 -- WETLANDS

The ABAG land use maps are consistent with the mapping of the U.S. Geological Survey, rather than that of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The USGS mapping was developed using criteria from their national land use mapping program. The mapping was developed to indicate general land use patterns, not specifically to identify wetlands areas. Mapping completed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and referenced in the Wetlands Status and Trends Report of the San Francisco Estuary Project (SFEP) is a more appropriate source of specific wetlands information, both because wetlands that are smaller in extent have been identified, and because the wetlands subcategories are more comprehensive and descriptive. No attempt has been made to integrate the wetlands mapped by the Fish and Wildlife Service into the land use maps. By maintaining two separate sources of maps, wetlands present in areas dominated by another land use (such as industrial) can be identified. Thus, the mapping of the USGS has been shown on these maps. For more information on wetlands mapping, see the Wetlands Status and Trends Report produced by ABAG for the San Francisco Estuary Project.

Category 61 -- Forested Wetlands

According to USGS, "Forested Wetlands are wetlands dominated by woody vegetation. Forested Wetlands includes seasonally flooded bottomland hardwoods, mangrove swamps, shrub swamps, and wooded swamps including those around bogs" (Anderson and others, 1976). Within the land use study area, the only type of forested wetlands are those classified in the Wetlands Status and Trends Report as "Riparian Forest" or "Palustrine Wooded Vegetation."

Category 62 -- Nonforested Wetlands

According to USGS, "Nonforested Wetlands are dominated by wetland herbaceous vegetation or are nonvegetated. These wetlands include tidal and nontidal fresh, brackish, and salt marshes and nonvegetated flats and also freshwater meadows, wet prairies, and open bogs" (Anderson and others, 1976). This category includes those classified in the Wetlands Status and Trends Report as tidal and freshwater marshes, as well as seasonal and diked ponds and marshes.

Category 63 -- Salt Evaporation Ponds

Wetlands along San Francisco Bay used for the production of salt. This category includes those lands classified as "Salt Evaporators" or "Lacustrine Non-Vegetated Diked" in the Wetlands Status and Trends Report.

Category 64 -- Land on USGS Base Maps but Water on USGS Land Use Maps

This category includes those areas depicted as land on the USGS 7.5' quadrangle maps, but shown as water on the USGS LUDA maps. This category, along with Category 56, were created to deal with discrepancies which occur in the mapping of the land-water boundary shown on these two data sources.

G. CATEGORY 7 -- SPARSELY VEGETATED LAND

These areas have limited ability to support life and are characterized by a general absence of vegetation. The U.S. Geological Survey terms this category "Barren Land."

Category 71 -- Salt Flats

These areas are generally dry, as opposed to the salt evaporation ponds in the Bay Area, which have been mapped as Category 63.

Category 72 -- Beaches

This category includes the smooth, gently sloping areas of sand and gravel in shoreline areas.

Category 73 -- Sand Other than Beaches

This category includes non-beach sand, or dunes.

Category 74 -- Bare Exposed Rock

Included are bedrock exposures, talus slopes and other non-vegetated rock.

Category 75 -- Strip Mines, Quarries and Gravel Pits

These areas of extractive mining are included as a subdivision of barren land (75) rather than of urban or built-up land (17 or 13)

Category 76 -- Transitional Areas

These areas of sparsely vegetated land are characterized by having an urban component of use. For example, some airport buffer areas are included as Category 76. These areas are not slated for redevelopment or further development, as is the case with categories 174 and 175. When the information is available, they have been subdivided into:

761 -- Sanitary Land Fills

762 -- Other Transitional

Category 77 -- Mixed Sparsely Vegetated Land

This category is used when a variety of sparsely vegetated land types occur, or when the appropriate subcategory could not be identified. The U.S. Geological Survey terms this category "Mixed Barren Land."

Although the following two categories are not present in the Bay Area, they are present in the Central Valley watershed (in portions of the Sierra Nevada, Cascade and Trinity Mountains which drain into the Central Valley and from there into San Francisco Bay). They are included in this report to provide potential users with the complete list of two-digit subcategories used by the U.S Geological Survey in the LUDA map set.

H. CATEGORY 8 -- TUNDRA

Category 81 - Shrub and Brush Tundra

Category 82 - Herbaceous Tundra

Category 83 - Bare Ground

Category 84 - Wet Tundra

Category 85 - Mixed Tundra

CATEGORY 9 -- PERENNIAL SNOW OR ICE

Category 91 - Perennial Snowfields

Category 92 - Glaciers
